The tumor-fuel question, from the bench

Angela Poff, Ph.D., works at USF in the same Florida mill that measured flexibility under load. She took Seyfried’s question — Current #61 — into dishes and animals: what happens when a growth that prefers one fuel meets a mill that can use another. That is literacy. It is not a cancer protocol. It is not a ketone ester we sell.

She is not this page as a sidekick. She is this page as the bench that kept the question honest. The oncologist stays in the chair.

A paper is not a bag

Her layer	Not this page
Tumor fuel asked at the bench.	A Foundation cancer stack.
Ketones as one fuel among others.	An ester aisle. A meter we brand.
Seyfried’s question kept honest.	A reason to skip the oncologist.
Her own chair. Perlmutter is next.	A lab footnote. A protocol reprint.

What the layer taught

A mouse is not a person. A dish is not Tuesday. If the question in your own body is a tumor, take it to the licensed chair. Eat is still the plate. The brain as mill weather is next.

How you keep it

Keep Eat. Keep Correction. Do not stop licensed oncology because a Florida paper got hopeful. Do not buy an ester from a Current.

Be brave enough to honor the bench without becoming the protocol

You are not behind if you never read a ketone-ester paper. You are not too late. Your mills are still minting every second of every day. Feed them. The bench is a layer. It is not Tuesday.

The question

Will you honor the bench that asked the tumor-fuel question — and still keep the oncologist in the chair? The answer is yours. You can take it. You can leave it. No one can take it for you.

If you take it, eat tonight. That is Poff, kept as a bench — not as a protocol and not as a footnote.

If you want to keep learning, keep flowing with our Currents. David Perlmutter is next.

Notes

- This is education. It does not diagnose, treat, or claim to cure cancer. It does not print a ketogenic or ketone-ester protocol.

- It does not replace your physician, your oncologist, your medications, or the care you already have. Do not stop, delay, or refuse licensed oncology from this page.
- If a question is about a tumor in your own body, take it to a licensed professional who knows that chair.
- The Foundation does not sell ketone esters, meters, or a Poff stack. Public language stays Metabolic Correction. Seyfried remains Current #61. She is her own chair.
